The letter tells of the Carrizal fight, giving the text of Capt. Morey's letter and concludes, as follows:

"It has been stated that the Carrizal engagement was a mere incident; and that Carranza's refusal to allow American troops to proceed further into Mexico was in inself a cause of war. History will not justify this nation in going to war because a neighboring republic having allowed our troops to enter its territory in pursuit of a ing republic having allowed our troops to enter its territory in pursuit of a band of outlaws demanded that these troops should not march further into its territory after the band of outlaws had been scattered and many of them killed.

"The fact that Mexico is a small nation, torn by recent revolutions, and now undergoing a period of reconstruction, made it a matter of national honor that we should scrupulously respect its rights. We believe that if this nation should choose to go to war rather than accept the offer of mediation made by the Latin American republics and accepted by Mexico it will be a blet upon American history."
